Aboriginal Population Growth

Bruce-Grey-Huron-Perth-Georgian Triangle

A Steady Increase

The number of people who identified themselves as an Aboriginal person has increased steadily in this region. Most of this growth can be attributed to a high birth rate. There are also more individuals identifying themselves as an Aboriginal person, and there has been a reduction in the number of incompletely enumerated Indian reserves.

Location Patterns

Urbanization

The Aboriginal population is increasingly urbanized. In 2006, 62% lived in an urban centre, a slight increase from 2001. Urban areas include large cities, or census metropolitan areas, and smaller urban centres. The share of aboriginal people living on reserves has decreased to 20% in 2006, while the share living in rural areas has increased slightly.

Fading Languages

There has been substantial erosion in the use of Aboriginal languages in recent decades. In Ontario, the share of Aboriginals who most commonly speak an Aboriginal language at home and the share whose mother tongue is Aboriginal, both dropped between 2001 and 2006. However, more people had a knowledge of an Aboriginal language than had an Aboriginal mother tongue. This suggests that some speakers must have learned their Aboriginal language as a second language. It is thought that the process itself of learning an Aboriginal language may contribute to increased self-esteem and community well-being, as well as cultural continuity.

Aboriginal Concentrations

share of the total population:
South-Western Ontario
census divisions, 2006

Population Proportions

Although Ontario leads all provinces with 21% of Canada's aboriginal population, the aboriginal share of Ontario's total population is quite low at 2%. Bruce exceeds this provincial average with Aboriginal people comprising 3.4% of the county's population. Grey county along with Wasaga Beach, Collingwood, and Clearview have a lighter concentration, while Perth and Huron have less than 1% of their populations being Aboriginal.

A Youthful Population

The Aboriginal population is much younger than the general population. Children and youth of this region aged 24 and under made up 42% of all Aboriginal people, compared with 31% of the general population. There is a similar proportion of children under 4 years old in the Aboriginal and general populations, but a significant difference in the share of older children and teenagers. Nevertheless, like the total population, the Aboriginal population is slowly getting older. The number of Aboriginal seniors, while relatively small, increased by 14% between 2001 and 2006. This aging of the Aboriginal population is due to declining fertility rates and gradual improvements in life expectancy. However, fertility rates remain higher than average and life expectancy still lags behind that of the total population.

Growth Rates

High Growth

The Aboriginal population has grown faster than the non-Aboriginal population. Between 2001 and 2006, it increased 27% in this region, over 13 times faster than the 2% rate of growth for the general population over the same period. Collectively, Ontario experienced a similar trend.

Median Ages

Local counties and Ontario, 2006

	Aboriginals	Total Population
Bruce	32	45
Grey	30	44
Huron	33	42
Perth	30	39
Ontario	30	39

A Low Median Age

The median age is the point where one-half of the population is older, and the other half is younger. In 2006, the median age for each of the local counties' Aboriginal populations was significantly lower than that of the general population. This contrast of median age is also found provincially.

Aboriginal Composition

Population by Aboriginal Group
Bruce-Grey-Huron-Perth-Georgian Triangle, 2006

Changing Composition

Of the three Aboriginal groups, the fastest gain in population between 2001 and 2006 occurred among those who identified themselves as Métis. In this region, their numbers increased 77%, to an estimated 1,455. The North American Indian population grew more modestly at 10% from 2001 to 2006 and now totals 2,845

Consequently, the share of the Aboriginal population who identify as Métis has grown steadily. In 2006, they accounted for one in three (33%) of Aboriginal people, up from 23% in 2001. First Nations people accounted for the majority (63%) of Aboriginal people in 2006, while Inuit represented 1%.

Registered / Treaty Status Declines

Registered Indian refers to those persons who reported they were registered under the Indian Act of Canada. Treaty Indians are persons who are registered under the Indian Act and can prove descent from a band that signed a treaty. There has been a significant decrease in the share of registered/treaty Indians amongst aboriginals in this region and province wide, with the local decrease being greater than average. A majority of registered and treaty Indians in Canada reside in one of approximately 900 small First Nations communities.
